How to Make
Blueberry Pie

BY CAROLINE COE.

This is how I make my blueberry pie:

I line my pie pan with rich pie crust, and then take three cups of blueberries, one scant cup of sugar, pinch of salt, one heaping tablespoon of flour.

I mix all together, seeing that the berries are covered with the sugar and flour and put into crust lined pan and add one teaspoon of lemon juice and a few bits of butter on top of berries. Then I cover with top crust and bake twenty minutes in quick oven.

Served warm, with ice cream or whipped cream, my blueberry pie gladdens every heart around my home table.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING.

Wash one quart of blueberries and spread evenly in pie pan. Make cake batter of one-fourth cup of butter one cup of sugar, 2 eggs, one and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, two-thirds of a cup of sweet milk, one-half teaspoon of vanilla and a pinch of salt.

Sift flour and baking powder together, cream butter and sugar. Add eggs and beat ten minutes. Add the flour and half the milk. When all lumps have disappeared add remaining milk. Beat smooth, turn this cake batter over the berries and bake thirty minutes. Serve hot with foamy or hard sauce.

HARD SAUCE.

One-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar (beaten to cream). Add one egg and beat all together until light and foamy. Add flavoring, vanilla or nutmeg. Keep in cool place. Have pudding hot and turn sauce over it and serve at once.

HARD SAUCE

One-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar (creamed together), add grated rind of half an orange and one tablespoon of orange juice. Set on ice until ready to serve.

STEAMED BLUEBERRY PUDDING.

Cream one and one-half cups of sugar with one-half cup of butter, add two eggs (beaten each one in thoroughly), one-half cup of milk and two cups of flour, into which sift two teaspoons of baking powder. Beat mixture and add two cups of blueberries. Steam three hours. Serve with cream sauce.

One cup of sweet cream, one-third of a cup of powdered sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Have cream ice cold, beat until stiff and add sugar and vanilla.

BLUEBERRY AND CURRANT PRESERVES

Five pounds of blueberries, one pound of currants, six pounds of sugar. Boil currants and drain off juice.

TWO PRETTY AFTERNOON GOWNS

THAT EMBODY THE NEW MODES

Here are two of the gowns that will be fashionable for evening, informal evening and afternoon functions during the coming season. One of them is a lace gown into which a note of originality has been introduced.

It is developed in pale turquoise-corn silk veil "slipped" with silk Alencon lace. The small kimono bodice is opened in "V" in the middle front over a pale-turkey corn chiffon waistcoat trimmed round the neck by the new upstanding pleated frill of the same material which is exceedingly becoming.

The half-long sleeves are also finished by two small frills of the same chiffon.

The kimono is totally veiled with a wide Alencon lace.

The waist is tightened with a high draped Pampadour taffeta ribbon with Empire green ground. The same ribbon makes two long sash ends and is knotted half way in a huge bow.

The underskirt is a plain pale turquoise-corn silk finished at the hem by add to blueberries. Place layer of berries in preserving kettle. Add layer of sugar, then another layer of berries, then sugar until all are used. Bring slowly to boiling point and boil slowly until thick. Put in small glass jars. Cover with paraffine.

a row of light stitches. It is veiled up to this hem by a long tunic of Alencon lace, shorter in the front.

Many features shown in the celebrated portraits of the XVIIIth century painters who have given us such charming glimpse of the frills are embodied in the other Redfern model of Ivory satin.

The bodice is of white silk muslin and makes a gathered chemisette or effect of waist coat with a small decolletage edged by a frill of plaited net. A gold lace drapes the sides of the bodice and makes the sleeves of a three-quarter length finished in spite of themselves, you see, and did not put sufficient value on the force of old associations in making a comparative reckoning.

A draped belt made of Perceval blue scarf falls to be knotted at the side-back with two long sash-ends, finished by passementry tassels. The skirt of Ivory satin is draped in front with small plaits held up by strass buttons.

OCTOBER 9 WILL BE FIRE PREVENTION DAY IN STATE

Friday, Oct. 9, will be Fire Prevention day throughout the state, and South Bend will take a hand in it also. This day has come to be an annual one in Indiana and is being advertised by the state fire marshal, Gov. Ralston will probably issue his proclamation in regard to the day within the next few weeks.

On this day residents of the city are expected to clear away all rubbish, trash and waste material in order to lessen the possibility of dangerous fires. According to reports from the office of the fire marshal, there have been 56 fires since May 15 due entirely to rubbish. The total damage caused by these fires alone amounts to $11,892.

Each year the South Bend school children are enlisted in the crusade against fires.

CARS LEAVE TRACK.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 7.—Several passengers were slightly injured when the Kansas City-Buffalo flyer on the Washburn railroad was wrecked here. The day coach, chair car and Pullman left the track and partly turned over. A broken switch joint was said to have been responsible for the accident.

GOOD MORNING, YOUR HONOR.

"Won't you let me go home to my family in Niles?" asked James Wallace of Judge Farabaugh Monday morning after he had been drunk. The judge wouldn't. Wallace said he came here Saturday to look for his wife's brother, and took a few drinks.

Albert Temmerman, arrested Sunday for begging, failed to give a good reason why he should stay in South Bend and not work, so he was ordered out of town.

ATTEND AUNT'S FUNERAL. Mr. and Mrs. William U. Martin went to Martin City Monday to attend the funeral of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Emmeline U. Haddock who died Saturday. Mrs. Haddock was 86 years old and for more than 50 years has been active in religious work.

When you're ailing and don't know just what's the matter with you, the safest thing to take is Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, both because it's the greatest all-round systemic regulator, and because it cannot work injury in any case, being purely vegetable. 25 cents, Tea or Tablets. LET MOTHER'S WAY
PREVAIL IN HOME

Miss Bonner Tells Daughters to Respect Her Old Fashioned Customs and Methods.

BY EVA BOHNER.

I have often spoken to you about youth and age, about the young and old generations and their duties and responsibilities, the one to the other, that I am afraid you will have but small patience to offer me for a return of the subject.

But I ask a little of your patience for the consideration of the same subject, viewed from a different angle, and brought under my notice by a little life incident which I witnessed recently.

I had been paying a brief visit to the mother of a large family of boys and girls, and all her talk during the preliminary half hour we had to ourselves, had been of Elsie—Elsie the adventurous, who had just returned from a long holiday of travel spent with a generous aunt; Elsie, the worldly-wise, who had done things which had previously only been dreamed of in her little home circle; Elsie, the much admired, who had come back with the halo of a romantic engagement circling her pretty head.

Shared Mother's Pride.

I shared in the mother's pride and delight in her daughter, sympathized with her in her joy of the traveler's return, and said how glad Elsie must feel to be back with her mother once again, in the dear old house which had always been her home until her aunt's kindness had opened up a new world for her.

A shadow passed across the mother's happy eyes as I spoke, and I seemed to hear the echo of a sigh from her lips, but all she said was that Elsie must find things very quiet, and the old home very shabby after all the splendid things she had seen and done in her wanderings.

You look at the shadow and listen to the sigh and say it is the same old tale, youth dazzled with the new and disconcerted and solid worth of the old and well trusted.

This girl was far from being cruel, far from neglecting the older interests for the new. Her mind was absorbed in her home, her brothers and sisters, and her dearly-beloved mother, and it was only one expression of love and interest which led her to compare and criticize, and to speak in favor of renovation and change. She wanted to help her home people in spite of themselves, you see, and did not put sufficient value on the force of old associations in making a comparative reckoning.

Daughter Needs Tact. If it had been my duty or my privilege to speak to that girl of what was in my thoughts, I should not have asked her to polish up her love for her mother and her home until it irradiated a still more brilliant glow. I should rather have asked her to show more tact and thought in the expression of her love.

Looking at the matter impartially, as an unbiased outsider may, I can quite agree that there were many things in that home—material things, I mean, not matters of spirit or feeling—which had been altered to advantage, which might justifiably be called old-fashioned and out-of-date.

But trying to view the position from that girl's standpoint, should have said that one criticism which hurt, one condemnation of a dearly-loved article or custom should have been unhesitatingly set aside when weighed in the scales of love against the trivial little irritation which it called forth.

Do Not Criticize.

This, then, is my message to my younger readers, many of whom will be returning to the home-nest after these few summer months, to tell all about their flights into the great world.

Never let your criticism leave behind a scar in fact it is doubtful if criticism is a justifiable weapon in your hands at all. Mould your own life, if you will, but when you look back at the travail, the work, and the achievement which lie behind the ever-present today of the people at home, you will be chary of forcing their fresh brilliance on the experience which has suffered and been strong.
